

Mr Tiwonge Machiwenyika is the Programme Policy Officer at the World Food Programme (WFP) where he leads a team that supports 12 countries under the Regional Bureau of Johannesburg in Southern Africa in designing, implementing and monitoring projects that aim to build resilience of households, communities, national and sub-national institutions against food security stresses and shocks. He drives the development of strategies and programmes for the region that build the absorptive, adaptive and transformative capacities of WFP supported communities. Tiwonge also leads WFP's efforts for the generation of evidence for the Conference of Parties (COP) on food security issues affecting the region.
